

The Documents Used In This Edition

by Duncan Harrington

The core of this edition was once a large roll for the West Riding, compiled for the collection due at Lady Day 1672, which formed the twentieth collection of the hearth tax. This roll has since been divided and now forms a number of separate smaller rolls in the National Archives within the E179 series of 'subsidy rolls', the large section of Exchequer records devoted to direct taxation. These smaller rolls each concern one or two wapentakes within the West Riding, E179/210/400 (Claro), E179/210/412 (Staincross), E179/210/413 (Agbrigg and Morley), E179/210/415 (Osgoldcross), E179/210/417 (Skyrack), E179/262/14 (Barkston Ash), E179/262/15 (Strafforth and Tickhill) and E179/210/418 (Staincliffe and Ewcross). Further details can be found in the special section of the National Archives website dedicated to this category of Exchequer documents: <www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/E179/>. Here Dr Jonathan Mackman, the cataloguer of E179 documents for Yorkshire, comments that, "The stitching marks clearly show that the present piece was once arranged as one continuous roll, with the membranes stitched end-to-end, and it would seem likely that all the pieces listed above were once joined together as one huge roll." The returns, in their present state, suggest that the original large roll was dismembered by modern 'conservators' who misplaced several of the membranes when restitching them. For the purposes of this edition the original sequence has been reconstructed, with explanations given where the modern numeration no longer progresses normally.

The compiler used only the fine inner side of the parchment. To join the membranes the ends were folded about 10mm at the top and bottom and hooked to the next membrane. The individual membranes were pinned at their four corners preparatory to being ruled, generally in pencil, but sometimes in ink. It is not possible to say at what point the membranes were sewn together, before the compiler entered the information on them, or after. Some clumsiness in the modern restitching has obscured a number of the entries. For instance, in the Claro wapentake roll, E179/210/400, entries are written along the folds created between membranes 18 & 19 and membranes 68 & 69. Careful scrutiny of such entries has enabled us to give these entries correctly and in full. The membranes are approximately 130mm to 140mm wide and vary in length from approximately 745mm to about 900mm. The documents currently comprise two membranes, joined as above, and stitched through at their upper end to form a number of rotulets.

In the case of E179/210/412 the scribe ruled the first nine membranes up in ink and then reverted to pencil returning to ink later in the document. It is not safe to assume that this was the convenient number of membranes joined together before being written upon and subsequently joined to the section above. Because the membranes are now only joined in their original format in pairs it is very difficult to make any judgement on the procedure the scribe employed in transcribing and joining this colossal document.

The whole return for the West Riding was written by one clerk – quite a feat. He was methodical in correcting his errors with hearth numbers, by writing in letters next to the corrected Arabic number the correct figure. Strangely he used a small Roman minim for the Arabic number 1 in figures larger than 9 and sometimes for a single minim. Thus iii stands for 111. To avoid confusion in the text all the figures are now given in Arabic numerals.

The return for the wapentake of Claro (E179/210/400) is exceptional in having a heading. This creates a strong presumption that it was the first return in the roll as delivered into the Exchequer. The heading explicitly states that the piece forms the return of James Collins, collector in the West Riding of the Lady Day 1672 payment. As well as the generic title 'Ebo[rum] Westrideing ending att lady 1672', it also has on the reverse of this first membrane in Latin that, 'It was delivered by the hand of John Peables clerk of the peace within written the sixth day of December in the 27th year of the reign of Charles the Second' [1675]'. Written by one of the Exchequer clerks it probably demonstrates that this membrane was on the outside of the roll. It appears that not only was this handed to the Exchequer over three years after the return was made, but also with at least one other document, E179/210/399 which was a return for the whole riding for Michaelmas 1671 and Lady Day 1672 giving the 'old view' and 'new view' and giving details of increases and decreases in taxable hearths in each settlement: hearths demolished, new built, fallen down and those now empty. It looks as if the two documents were produced as part of the same process, possibly during an investigation into arrears. E179/210/399 was presumably compiled to provide an explanation to the Exchequer of the differences between the Lady Day 1672 collection and previous payments. It is possible that an undated schedule of defaulters for the West Riding was also handed in at the same time.

Equally, we can surmise that the last wapentake in the original roll was Barkston Ash wapentake (E179/262/14), since its last membrane has the subscription of three justices of the peace and the clerk of the peace. Furthermore this last membrane only has stitching marks at its head. Since we cannot tell the order of the other wapentakes in the original large roll, the separate rolls for each wapentake have been arranged geographically from north to south for the purposes of this edition.

Ainsty

Since no Lady Day 1672 return for the Ainsty wapentake appears to have survived in the National Archives, the return for the Ainsty has been taken from the sheriff's return now at Wakefield Metropolitan District Council Library, as the Nomina Villarum.¹ This return comes from an earlier stage in the accounting process than the Exchequer copy, and indeed the Exchequer copy is most probably derived from this return, or both may derive from some now lost roll kept by the receivers. The Wakefield document differs in some respects from the copy delivered to the Exchequer by the clerk of the peace. These differences show by comparing the transcription of this wapentake with that of the others. In the Wakefield document, the hearths of properties that were empty, or were discharged by certificate, are shown individually as the lists were compiled, whereas in the Exchequer returns these households were consolidated into blocks. Furthermore, the Wakefield return names the poor, whereas the Exchequer returns merely give their total numbers, and their names are simply 'omitted by reason of poverty.' Sheriff returns survive for other wapentakes as well, labelled 'Nomina Villarum'. However, no attempt has been made to collate these transcripts with the Exchequer records, although, where necessary reference, has been made to certain missing entries, which are noted in the footnotes.

Osgoldcross

We have not used the part of the gigantic Lady Day 1672 roll devoted to Osgoldcross wapentake, since it is very fragmentary and in a very poor state. Twenty-six membranes survive in E179/210/415, twelve other membranes at four different call numbers, and some of it does not survive at all. For details, see the list of surviving West Riding hearth tax documents in Appendix II. The return used for Osgoldcross E179/262/13 therefore comes from the next surviving return for the whole of the West Riding, that for the year 1673 and Lady Day 1674. Here the membranes are approximately 350mm wide and 600mm in length written on both sides of the parchment in three columns. The back of the parchment is written in the reverse direction to the front to make reading easier. The membranes are folded approximately 10mm from the end and are sewed through the fold in fours onto four cords to create a spine which has then been glued. As such there appears to have been an outside sheet of parchment creating a cover which has now been lost. The scribe numbered the membranes on the fold and these numbers can be found in the binding and sometimes on the spine, indicating that none of the 125 membranes has been lost. The last membrane shows that John Peables, the Clerk of the Peace, delivered this particular document into the Exchequer on 6 December 1675 on exactly the same date as the earlier returns. The scribe of this return would be delighted to know that the format of his presentation and binding has ensured that it has remained intact for well over 300 years, a situation that has not befallen the earlier returns.

Editorial Method

The separate rolls for each wapentake have been arranged geographically from north to south for the purposes of this edition. Within each wapentake the transcript published here follows the order of the original, that is to say, alphabetically by township. In the original the text was written in a single column, apart from the Osgoldcross wapentake taken from the 1673-4 return which was written in three columns. Here it is entirely printed in two columns. The text should not be read across, but down the left hand column, and only then across to the right hand column. The original membrane numbers are given at the appropriate place in the text, and also with column numbers for Osgoldcross.

Editorial comment has been relegated to footnotes, except extensions which appear in square brackets eg. Ebo[rum] or ten[an]ts. To indicate that there was a gap in the original, e.g. no hearth number [blank] has been used. Names and numbers illegible due to membrane damage are represented by ... The original punctuation has not been retained because of the difficulties of interpretation and the problems of distinguishing between a mark and ink showing through.

Place names

The place names are printed in bold. Where the modern form is different from the original, it has been added in brackets.

Personal names

It has not been possible to replicate the seventeenth-century script, superscript or some of the abbreviations. The names are written as found whether they are in an abbreviated form or variant spellings. For certain letters it is not always easy to distinguish between 'n', 'u' and 'v'. In these instances, the modern version such as in David has been used. The reader should also be aware that, in compiling the Exchequer copy, the clerk has introduced his own spellings and errors. In a number of cases the editors have examined the sheriff's return, and this is noted in the footnotes. However they have not collated the text entirely and in cases of doubt it may be necessary to examine the sheriff's text as well.

Status

Abbreviations giving title or status are also written as found. Many of them have several variations such as widdow which appears as widd, wid and the Latin form of vid.

² There is a scribal error since the total is 77, but it needs to be noted that there is a small dot in front of the number two, following the name Mr Thomas Craven, perhaps suggesting 12 hearths, thereby reconciling the figures with the total.

⁶ The forename is perhaps to read as Henry.

⁷ This is a scribal error as the total is 73, yet the entry for Martin Dickinson's number of hearths is inconclusive, and could be read as one, thereby reconciling the difference.

⁵⁶ This entry has been interpreted as tenants occupying twenty-three houses each with one hearth. But, it should be noted that there were, at least by the early eighteenth century, and perhaps before, two large houses in Kippax, namely Kippax Park, occupied by the Bland family, and Kippax Hall. Yet there is no positive proof that the Hall belonged to the Slingsby family, nor even that it existed in 1672; see I. Hall, Samuel Buck's Yorkshire Sketchbook (Ilkley, 1979), 218, 222. Furthermore, the word tents abbreviated in this form in this period is generally used to refer to tenements.

²⁰⁸ Because of the poor condition of the relevant section of the Lady Day 1672 roll, see above 00-00, 00-00, the assessment for this wapentake has been taken from that for Lady Day 1673, which was also used for the Michaelmas 1673 and Lady Day 1674 collections.
